Poetry.

A Tragic Story.

There lived a sage in days of yore And he a bandsome pigtail wore; But wondored much and sorrowed more, Because it hung behind him.

He mas'd upon this curious case, And swore he'd change the pigtail's place, And have it hanging at his face. Not daugling there behind him.

Says he, "The mystery I've found; I'll turn me round." He turned him round, But still it hung behind him.

Then round and round, and out and in, All day the puzzled sage did spin; In vain—it mattered not a pin— The pigtail hung behind him.

And right and left, and round about, And up and down, and in and out. He turned: but still the pigtail stout Hung steadily behind him.

And though his efforts never slack; And though he twist, and twirl, and tack; Alas! still faithful to his back. ill faithful to his back.
The pigtail hangs behind him.

among which may be classed the whole of our Chinese population—pay visits to the graves of their dead friends, bearing for the sake of depriving us of it, and we are testimonials of their affectionate remembrance, commenced yesterday, and all day long the road leading to Lone Mountain has been thronged with carriages filled with celestial visitors and Caucasmorning, we found the ceremonies in manlike manner. honor of the dead in full blast, and the place swarming with celestials, with a fair sprinkling of male and female visitors of our own race. The ceremonies did not seem to partake in any marked degree of a religious character, but seemed more like a friendly visit, lunch and chit-chat with the dear departed. Sticks of prepared incense, or "Joss sticks," and red wax candles, with small sticks to hold them above the sand, were burning by the head of nearly every grave and in and around the open brick enclosure or temple, and its wood-en counterpart on the hill above.

Nearly every party, on driving on the scholarships heretofore issued, and to be transground, would let off a feu de joie of fire ferable to a second party any time within three grackers by way of announcing to their years after the holder thereof shall have been in crackers by way of announcing to their friends in the spirit land that they were on hand and prepared for business. Then the roast pig, oranges, bananas, pieces of fresh sugar cane, and other toothsome delicacies prepared for the occasion, would be unloaded from the wagons and a nice spread, or lay out, would be arranged at each gray out, wagons and a nice spread, or lay out, would be arranged at each grave or in the nondescript enclosures, which, for want of a better name, we call temples. After the spread had been arranged, rows of tiny porcelain cups would be set down on the sand and poured full of sam enoo, or other alcoholic or vinous liquor. After a few minutes a fire would be kindled, and baskets full of square, vari-colored paper would be burned, the eat-ables would be packed up again and put back in the wagons, the liquor would be turned on the fire, or on the ground, and the joss sticks and candles lighted and left burning. Then a woman would take up a handful of pale straw colored squares of paper, each with a bit of gold foil fastened on the centre, and twirling them dexterously in her hand so as to arrange them in the form of a Catherine wheel, as a Caucasian sport will some-times arrange a pack of cards, flinging them into the air, sending them flutter-ing away on the wind for many rods. The whole cemetery all around the Chinese quarter is full of these little squares of gilt paper, and whatever virtue they may possess will be largely shared by the occupants of the Potter's Field of our own race, whose grayes are strewn with them as the ground in the forest is strewn with leaves. The visitors would then walk around for a short time, chat, laugh, and exchange continued to the stress of the largely shared by the sould be sould of gilt paper, and whatever virtue they time, chat, laugh, and exchange con-gratulations with their living friends, Sash. Blin and then ride away to the city, apparently in the best of humor with themselves and the rest of mankind. All the celestials come and go in carriages, the rich merchants in the costliest lines to be hired at the Plaza, and the poorer classes in humbler style, but all in vehicles of some kind. In a hack drawn by with silver-mounted Matching, Turning, Scroll Sawing, two fine grays, with silver-mounted harness, you would see four opulent merchants in their "Sunday's best," smok-ing eigars, and evidently enjoying them-selves thoroughly, and next to them would come an express wagon, loaded with common laborers, who clubbed to-gether and by riding a dozen in one gether, and by riding a dozen in one conveyance managed to keep the expense within their means, while a third would be filled with women of the publie class only. And the offerings they brought to please their dead friends were of like diverse character. Behind the carriages of the rich men would come a wagon loaded with delicacies of the costliest description, hogs roasted entire, and provisions by wholesale, while the poor cigarmaker, washerwoman, or the pedler of fruit and vegetables, would humbly bear in his hands a few trifles such as his means would justify him in of like diverse character. THE GREATEST ADVANCE STEP EVER MADE IN THE ART.

The main difficulty in wearing artificial teeth is, they do not hold in their place tirmly enough, and add to this the annoyance of food getting under the plate while eating. I have discovered a method of so constructing the plate on which the teeth are set that they will not start or drop while eating or speaking, neither will any particles of food get under the plate, no matter what the condition of the mouth is, which is not true of any method hithertoused.
